The County Treasurer's books for the col-fection of the first installment of the tax for the current year were closed on Saturday last. A very deep interest preown, and the services are largely attended. The Pastor expects assistance the latter part f this week, and good results are anticipa-

The News and Courier's prize story, "Asurst," has attracted very general commendation throughout the State, and that paper now announces that with the number of June 12th another story, entitled the "Bloom of the Peach," will be begun in the weekly edition. The News and Courier now reaches all points along the Greenville and Columbia Railroad on the day of its publication, which advantage, taken in onnection with its enterprise and ability, vill doubtless secure for it very large accesons to its subscription list in this section of the State.

The Greenville and Columbia Railroad as changed its schedule, which will hereher throw the trains into Anderson as foliws: Going down in the morning, arrive twenty-five minutes past seven, leave at hirty-five minutes past seven; going up in e evening, arrive at forty minutes past six and leave at ten minutes of seven. The schedule is arranged so as to come through from Charleston in one day, and is, at this son of the year, a very convenient one, being a great improvement on the same character of schedule run last summer.

The Greenville Advertises has the following receipt for keeping cool: "Get a copy of the success of Miss Moore's first picnic. A the Abbeville Medium, lay down on it, and more pleasant and sunny-faced group I have over yourself with the Anderson INTELLI-ENCEB. This is a sure remedy, if the coolness existing between those two papers can has abundant reasons to be enconged. I have never attended a picnic that was more ol." The coolness in the sense of which the Advertiser speaks exists only in its imagnation. The Medium and the INTELLIGEN-ER are on the best of terms. We do not always agree on trifling matters, but then we tell each other what we think about the subject, and all is right. The person who ould be wrapped in these two papers would, therefore, be more comfortable that if some others afforded the covering, for when some papers differ an immense amount of caloric is generated in the way of anger. It is not a bad idea for papers to keep cool over their differences.

We regret to announce the death of Mrs Sallie Breazeale, wife of Mr. S. A. Breazeale, which occurred at the residence of her husband in the town of Abbeville or Tuesday, the 3rd inst. Mrs. Breazeale was a daughter of the late Rev. William McGee of this County, and leaves many relatives and friends in our midst who mourn her untimely death. She was an excellent and amiable lady, who made friends wherever she went. On Wednesday her remains were interred, after appropriate funeral services, in the family burying ground near the site of the residence of her father in this County. The services were largely attended by the relatives and friends of the deceased, who feel the most sincere regret for the death of one so dear to them.

According to previous announcement, the eleventh anniversary of Anderson Division No. 1, Sons of Temperance, was celebrated by a public meeting in the Court House or. Thursday evening last. At the appointed hour the Division filed out of Temperance Hall and marched in procession to the Court House, where they found a large audience awaiting them. After music by the Pal-metto Band and prayer by Rev. J. E. Carlisle, the Worthy Patriarch, Mr. Charles C. Langston, introduced in a short and approprinte speech Mr. H. G. Scudday as the first speaker for the occasion. After referring to the reorganization of the Division after the war, when the morals of the whole country were more or less corrupt and intemperance was rife, and to the great successes that had attended the efforts of the temperance workers, he discussed in an able and instructive manner the subject of true human greatness. Rev. W. H. Strickland was next introduced. He entertained the audience for nearly an hour in discussing the objections generally entertained by the public to organized opposition to intemperance. His speech was a very strong argument for the temperance workers, and was interspersed with an appreciable amount of humor. He held the close attention of the audience throughout his entire address, and evidently made a deep impression on their minds. At the close of Mr. Strickland's speech, the meeting was closed by benediction by Mr. Carlisle.

The Abbeville Medium has this to say in reply to our article about the ladies of Anon and Williamston:

derson and Williamston:

Our neighbor has magnified a molehill into a mountain, and written a great deal about nothing. Our crusade paragraph was not intended as "a slur to the ladies of two refined and intelligent communities." We simply gave circulation to a rumor that reached our cars of the intention of the fair daughters of Anderson to "beard the lion in his den" and subdue the demon of intemperance at every sacrifice. We did not question their motives or improperly estimate their zoal, but we doubted the success of their crusade—only this and nothing more. We gave the item as a matter of news. We heard it at Belton on our way home from a recent visit to Greenville, and had no notion that "ninety-nine out of a hundred readers" would have read it with vulgar suspicion or take it as at all reflecting upon the ladies of either place named in the paragraph.

This is as near an apology as our contemporary knows how to come, and shows that his article was written inconsiderately and without any foundation for what his imagination built out of some meaningless joke of some person who was "craming" the editor with important "dots" for his journal. Considering everything, we suppose the ladies ought to forgive him, and we will join them in doing so if he will not omit to come to us as an exchange when he replies to us, and will in future give no further offonce by repeating such nonsensical statements with an air of reality.

A Tip-Top Pienie.

Mr. Entron: Having enjoyed the pleasure of attending a picnic given by Miss Emma Moore's school last Saturday, May 31st, a day long to be remembered by those present, and it having proved a perfect sucess, I ask room in your paper for a few "dots" concerning it.

The members of the school, with their comites, assembled at the academy, 13 miles southeast of this place, bearing baskets well supplied with pabula, about 8½ a. m.

Before 9 o'clock the juvenile band removed to Archer's Creek, a place selected by Miss Moore—and a beautiful place it was. There we were joined by one of the Trustees, and a family from High Shoals, among whom was the teacher from the High Shoals vicinity. The baskets were placed under a venerable old white oak, and fishing was soon commenced—the small ones fishing in the creek and the large ones on dry land, the latter using the more energy. A group strolled down the stream, landed on an island, joined in playing "mumble-peg," but continued fishing.

Abou: 11 a. m. we strolled back to the venerable oak. Between 12 and 1 p. m. the baskets were opened and their luscious contents profusely spread, to which all were cordially welcomed. Then came an impor-tant part of the picnic.

Immediately after our sumptuous repast, the talented and promising young law stu-dent, Mr. C. E. Wardlaw, was called upon to display his elecutionary powers, to which request he kindly acceded. His large and appreciative audience was highly arrused as well as instructed.

At the close of his address the lamb-like crowd returned to the Aca. The remainder of the afternoon was spent in a social dance, under the music of Mr. Green, for which he has many thanks. At 5 p. m. the picnic ended, and the crowd dispersed, exulting at little, old and young. The sc' ol marm universally enjoyed. Truly it deserves to be termed "tip-top."

The success with which the day was crowned, The joy that fill d the meeting. Shall in our every heart abound. While to Miss Moore we tender greeting.

Broadaway Divition

Ms. Berros: If you will indulge me a ittle while I will give your readers a few facts regarding Broadaway Division, Sons of Temperance, a well known organization in this County. Its place of meeting is well known to the community to be in a hall near Neal's Creek Church, because the benficial results of this organization are well

This Division, I believe, was organized on the 14th day of October, 1874, with perhaps about thirty-five members, about one-third of whom were ladies. They were persons of integrity of purpose, and their firm de termination and the patriotic loyalty which they bore to the honored cause has insured them a success far beyond their most sanguine expectations. Our community can now with pleasure ascribe to them the plaudit, "Well done." The lovely and acemplished women have adorned the hall by their presence and smiles. With these and many other incentives the men could do nothing but show their allegiance to the society. In consequence of this the Division stood the stormy campaign of 1876, when many of the societies ceased to work. You will naturally be lead to ask, What has this organization done extraordinarily? Your attention is directed to a few facts which are easily perceived, and are not matters of insignificance: Good houses of a substantial class have taken the places of dilapidated ones, fat horses of poor ones, pleasant, felicitous and proud homes of degraded and unpleasant ones, and, as a gentleman recently remarked, "yards formerly filled with litter and plank are now piled up with bales of cotton." Is not this an achievement? The Division has been one of the main auxiliaries in bringing about this reformation of our affairs. The following conversation recently took place between two prominent gentlemen who were traveling through the community in which this society is located. Mr. W. remarked to Mr. P.: "What a great change has taken place in this community since I passed here about three years ago. Do you attribute it to Democratic rule?" Mr. P. very sensibly answered: "In part only; that temperance society at Neal's Creek has had something to do with it."

On last Saturday night a pound supper was given in the hall, after the exercises of the Division were over, which, though hastily gotten up, resulted in a complete suc-From an bour to two hours after the sun had disappeared behind the western horizon could be seen the members coming in every direction with their baskets; and Mr. Editor, from the way the carriers leaned sideways and panted, we were assured there was "stuff" in them-and stuff it proved to be. After the table had been prepared on it could be seen delicacies, substantials, nick-nacks and, in fact, everything of which mind could conceive or heart desire. It seemed to me it would almost be a sin to destroy the beauty of it; but when our efficient W. P. extended the invitation to replenish the inner man, we, like Adam, could not resist the temptation, but felt constrained to taste. Taste-if you had seen Judge M., the Major and the Captain at the table you would not have called it tasting. We expect shortly to see them on crutches with their feet on their shoes. But why should an allusion be made to them particularly? We are all as deep in the mud as they are in the mire. Surely, from the amount of good estables brought the ladies expected us to stay there a week. Upon the whole it was one of the most pleasant and best conducted affairs in the way of a hastily gotten up supper it has ever been the good privilege of the writer to enjoy. Oh, that there was one every Saturday night! After all had participated in the social pleasures of the occasion, the ladies piled back into their baskets the nice cakes, &c., which were left from supper, and then the large crowd dispersed, all of whom were glad they belonged to old Broadaway Division.

Who could have done otherwise than spend those hours pleasantly? The party was composed of the dite of Ander-son and Greenville. By 10 o'clock the guests had all assembled, and on command given by jovial Joe, Jack came to the front, and after a few strokes of that familiar old and after a few strokes of that into him old air, the ladies mysteriously appeared ele-gantly masked. Oh! how strikingly love-ly! Now came the difficult problem to de-cide—which was t'other. For a moment deathly silence prevailed, then a rush for a partner for the time being. After a short interval of time was spent in walking, talk-ing and courting, the ladies unmasked, and lo and behold! the disappointed, blank countenances, when it was revealed to whom many of the young men ha ocen paying their attentions. The party, one and all, enjoyed themselves most admirably, judging from appearances. Evenings spent in this manner will be green spots, ever fresh in our memories.
